Textile Inspector For Air Force Lives At Mystery Farm Home No. 43, Works At Reliance Plant In Columbia

Mystery Farm Number 43 was identified by its owner Saturday morning when he came by the Sun-Mirror office and picked up his aerial photograph of the Mystery Home. The original mounted photograph was given to Milton Bourne.

Mr. Bourne said that he and his family have been living at Mystery Farm Home Number 43 a little over a year, having moved there a year ago last October. They bought the farm from J. C. Bass.

There are twelve acres in the place. Six of these are in cultivation by a renter. Two bales of cotton were made on the two acres that were in cotton.

Some corn is grown, though the acreage is small. Three and a half acres of the farm are in permanent pasture.

This permanent pasture was established and growing nicely when Mr. Bourne bought this farm, he says. Dallis grass and clover are continuing to make a good pasture for the one milk cow and her calf that are on it.

The little plot of timber is protected from fire and is being taken care of in every way possible.

Those who live at Mystery Farm Home Number 43 are Mr. Bourne, his wife and two boys. Mrs. Bourne was Carlene Baggett before their marriage. Darron Carol is three years of age and Tommy Dale is eighteen months.

Mr. Bourne is a native of Marion county and retains his church membership in the Goss Baptist Church. Mrs. Bourne is a member of the Improve Baptist Church. Mr. Bourne is a member of St. Albans Lodge Number 60 in Columbia.

Mrs. Bourne has her hands pretty well full with the two boys and the house but she likes to sew and her husband says she likes to keep house.

She has to keep a watchful eye out for Darron Carol who likes to visit the grocery store just across the road from the house. Mr. Bourne says Darron Carol likes to go to the store, which they don't mind. They do want him to be careful about crossing the road, though.

Mr. Bourne likes all forms of hunting and fishing. Whatever type of hunting or fishing that is in season is his favorite sport at one moment.

Mr. Bourne was working with Reliance when the war came along. He was drafted into service while working at Reliance and went into the Air Force.

The four years that Mr. Bourne spent in the Air Force was mostly working in textiles. The major part of this textile work was in parachutes, rigging and repairing them.

After being discharged from the Air Force, Mr. Bourne began working with them in a civil service capacity. His application to work as a textile inspector with the local Reliance plant was granted, so Mr. Bourne is stationed here. In all he has eight years of working in textiles to his credit.

The big garden that the Bournes cultivate to supply them with vegetables can be seen in the picture. This garden is a year 'round project and much canning is done from it.

The garden and the milk cow help to hold down grocery expenses and also add to the value and variety of the diet at Mystery Farm Home Number 43.

The radio at this home is a vital part of life. It is kept tuned to Station WGTU most of the time. Some of the favorite programs are "Queen for a Day, Hillbilly Hayride" and the sportscasts.

Mystery Farm Number 43 is located just past the Columbia Training School on Highway 44, the road to Improve. Mr. Bourne says this is a very good neighborhood and is just the right distance from town.

Although this farm is small it is the size Mr. Bourne says he wants. He doesn't have time to do much work around the place. Some of the land is rented. It doesn't take much to keep a good permanent pasture going when it is once established, he says, and whatever clipping and hay cutting that is necessary can be done by someone with the necessary equipment and who is doing custom work.

Life at Mystery Farm Home Number 43 combines the quiet and peacefulness of country living with the conveniences of city living.
